

Alexandria Gazette

MONDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 10.

LOVES OF CAPS.—We are told that both young and married ladies are again to wear dress caps; not little ornamental affairs perched on the crown of the head, such as matrons have been affecting, but genuine mob caps and turbans, such as were worn by the beauties depicted on canvases by Sir Joshua Reynolds and Sir Peter Lely, such as Lady Mary Wortley Montague and Angelica Kaufman, and her distinguished patroness Lady Wentworth, and her distinguished daughter, the Countess of St. Asaph. At St. Asaph's we have a hint of what these caps are to be. Among the Paris novelties are found breakfast, dinner, reception and opera caps. They are all made with crowns sufficiently large to cover the hair except a little fringe in the back of the neck. The breakfast cap is usually of muslin, organdy, or Swiss; it has ruffles of wrought muslin or lace—Torchon, Valenciennes or Smyrna, and a band and bow of ribbon, in colors and combinations to suit the individual fancy. Two colors of ribbons are frequently seen on the dressiest breakfast caps, and the contrasts in colors are very marked—say maroon and pale blue, or rose pink and ocellus, or lilac and bronze green. The dinner and reception caps are also of muslin or lace net for the crown; have lace borders, and are trimmed with gauze ribbons, striped or plaid or crepe woven ribbons, frequently two kinds on the same cap; flowers, small fruits, such as cherries, elderberries, strawberries, grapes, plums and oranges, the fruits mingled with the leaves and flowers of their kind. The effect is far more pleasing than might be supposed. Upon the opera cap there is the most lavish expenditure of materials. The crowns, of lace sprigged, lace, or of striped gauze or light colored silk, in all shades of color, rise, turban-like, above delicate fringe of lace, Malines, Valenciennes, or revived Venice point d'Angleterre, forming a rich and delicious frame for the face. The trimmings, of gauze and fancy ribbons, combining several colors, or in one rich shade of color woven with crepe and basket effects, and occasionally shot with a thread of gold or silver. The trimmings are massed over the forehead, consisting of poufs in the crown piece, loops of ribbons or gauze and fruit and flowers intermixed. —N. F. SIM.
